

Certificates Academic Year 2024-2025

Duke Divinity students may complete certificates. Many certificates are degree-based and are administered by Duke Divinity. Others are offered by other entities at Duke.

Divinity Degree-Based Certificates

Duke Divinity offers certificates for students enrolled in degree programs. Requirements for each certificate vary by degree program, but all require some combination of course work, curricular requirements, experiential education, and/or writing assignments. The below certificates are offered in the following degree programs. Completion of certificate is noted on student official transcript. Requirements for each certificate may be found on the intranet and in Stellic.

Other University Certificates

Students may participate in other certificate programs, some credit bearing and others non-credit. Credentialing is managed by the administering school or program.

Duke University offers a number of graduate certificates that can be earned as part of master's and doctoral degrees. Three certificates that may be of interest to Duke Divinity students in particular are: the Graduate & Professional Innovation & Entrepreneur \(I&E\) Certificate, the Global Health Graduate Certificate and the African & African American Studies Certificate. All certificates use interdisciplinary, collaborative, and experiential approaches to make meaningful connections and application. Duke University Continuing Studies also offers the Certificate in Nonprofit Management.

Divinity students may complete the non-credit Nonprofit Management certificate through the successful completion of two courses, PARISH 721 and 722.

Students interested in participating in other certificate programs outside of Duke Divinity should contact the administrator for the certificate program of interest to verify requirements and application processes. Due to the residential format of certificate courses, most of these programs are only open to residential Divinity students. Divinity students who participate in these programs should stay on paradigm; completing a certificate may require an exception from Academics to the Divinity School's policy that limits students to two courses outside the Divinity School or the Graduate School of Religion. Students wishing to participate in a graduate certificate outside of Divinity should consult their academic advisor early in their program.
