

Site Locator for Register of Charles Wesley's Preaching

Introduction

The list which follows on the next page provides location details for the sites mentioned in the register of Charles Wesley's preaching. Sites range from cities, to villages, to hamlets, to manor houses. They stretch across England, Ireland, and Wales; as well as Wesley's short trip to North America.

The general format of the location description is: village, county/shire, nation. For smaller sites, reference indicators of proximity to larger sites are often included. Charing Cross is used as the traditional center for London in such proximity descriptions.

Sites in England and Wales were identified using the online Gazetteer of British Place Names. This register uses the traditional county/shire name for sites, both to reflect how Wesley would have known the site and in keeping with preferred historical practice. Those who wish to know the modern "administrative county" (as used on Mapquest, for example) will find this listed too in the online Gazetteer.

Gazetteer of British Place Names: <http://www.gazetteer.co.uk/>

The Gazetteer also references the grid location for each site on the standard Ordnance Survey Maps of Great Britain (Landranger Series, 1:50 000). After each site in England or Wales we list the number of the OS map that contains the site, and the grid reference. There is another online site where you can plug in the grid reference and see the map which contains the site

Geograph: <http://www.geograph.org.uk/gridref/>

Neither the Gazetteer nor the Ordnance Survey Maps of Great Britain cover Ireland. The register gives only the county names and proximity locators. This should be sufficient for locating the site on Google Maps, which is the most reliable and accessible online source.
